LABOR DAY CELEBRATION BIG SUCCESS

Large Crowd in Attendance and Good Program of Sports—Dance in Evening Also a Success—List of Prize Winners.

Thanks to the weather man for handing out such excellent holiday weather, the celebration held here on Labor Day was one of the most successful held in Redcliff for some time.

From early morning a vast crowd were seen coming from all directions it was quite evident that a record crowd would be in attendance. This proved to be the case, for when the time arrived to start the afternoon program one of the largest crowds in the history of the town had assembled at the grounds.

The day's program started off at 10:30 in the morning with a football match between the married and single men of the town. This proved most interesting and exciting, as the outcome was in doubt till the last.

At 1:30 in the afternoon the program of athletic events was commenced and from that to the finish the interest did not flag. During the afternoon the crowd provided by the G. W. V. A. was well maintained and the ladies in charge made a good financial showing for their day's labor.

Immediately after the tag events a baseball match was played between the married and single men. This brought the afternoon program to a close and as it lasted till dark it meant that the whole afternoon was well occupied. The game was closely contested. At the end of the seventh inning the score was a tie with 4 all.

In the evening there was a dance in Reid's hall under the auspices of the L. A. of the G. W. V. A. This also was well patronized and the enjoyable evening spent was a fitting close to a successful day. The floor was in excellent condition and the exceptionally fine music provided was most favorably commented upon all around.

On the whole the day was one of the most successful and enjoyable in many months. The following is a list of the prize winners in the different events and in each excellent prize were offered:

To Lay Corner Stone of Presbyterian Church

Word is now progressing favorably in connection with the erection of the new Presbyterian church here. Mr. Broughton, who has the contract for the brick work, now has the basement portions and supports completed and is making good headway on the main walls.

At a meeting of the managers held last week it was decided to ask the local Masonic lodge to perform the ceremony of laying the corner stone. The lodge has accepted and is now taking the necessary steps to have this ceremony performed in accordance with their ancient form. At present it is expected that this ceremony will be performed on the evening of Sept. 29th. Full particulars in connection with this will be given later.

LOCAL BRANCH
G. W. V. A.
NOTES.

Col. Margeson, who was to have been in Redcliff this week to explain to G. W. V. A. members the new regulations in connection with the new uniform, has sent word stating that he will not be able to be here as planned for this trip. However, he has indicated that he will visit Redcliff at a later date, full particulars of which will be given in a future issue.

At the date for the regular general meeting of the G. W. V. A. falls on Labor Day, it has been decided to postpone this meeting till Monday, Sept. 13th. The meeting will be held in the hall rooms at 8 p.m. All members are urgently requested to be present.

Canada's Status Acceptable to British

Winning Cave, who is a visitor in Winnipeg, in an interview stated: "Canada's status as a nation is a result of her place in the League of Nations, is entirely acceptable to the British people, and the general feeling is one of extreme friendliness for Canada. They are desirous of seeing Canada secure her full rights as a nation, at the same time co-operating to the fullest making the British empire secure."

Winning Cave said England is now recovering from the war.

Labor M. P. Condemns The Soviet Doctrine

A notable feature of the speaking at the Labor Day demonstration at the exhibition in Toronto was the advocacy of moderation and the denunciation of extreme measures on the part of labor representatives. Sergeant Major McNamara, labor-member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto, Toronto, was particularly denunciatory of the Socialists and other labor hawks.

He strongly condemned Socialism and the kindred "isms" which he characterized as a "damnable crew" to the allied cause since 1914 and a help to Communism.

Mr. McNamara said he got ashamed when he heard discourses of "Socialism" preached in broken English, on the floor of the Toronto district trades and labor council. He urged members of unions to exercise their ballot at labor meetings in order to elect sane and progressive principles would be adhered to.

Earthquake in Italy Wipes Out Whole Town

Scores of lives are believed to have been lost in the district north of Florence, Italy, which was severely shaken by an earthquake yesterday morning. An earthquake of this kind, region comes in every falling telegraph and telephone lines, the extent of the disaster seems to be growing and there is a possibility the damage done may be much more serious than was at first believed.

Local reports state that the whole town of Pistoia has been demolished.

SCHOOL OPENED WITH OLD STAFF LAST TUESDAY

School Board and Alliance Officials Agree to Hold Investigation by Impartial Committee—School in Operation in Meantime.

Shortly after our last issue was out an agreement was arrived at between the School Board and Alliance officials as a result of which our school opened up on Tuesday morning of this week at all of last term's teachers in charge.

Mr. McDonald, of Edmonton, whom we announced in our last issue had been engaged, on Monday, returned on Friday. He claimed conditions here had been misrepresented to him, and that after investigation he was convinced the teachers were in the right. For this reason he did not feel inclined in attempting to re-organise the staff.

Mr. Buchanan, inspector of this district, was in town on Friday and in conference with the school board to discuss the situation. The outcome of this meeting was as above indicated. The agreement is that the teachers resume their duties for the present, pending an impartial investigation of the charges against the two teachers mentioned.

The investigation committee is to consist of one member appointed by the school board, one appointed by the teachers' union, and then two to select the third. All concerned agree to abide by the decision of the commission. This commission is to meet on Monday, September 13th, at 8 p.m. in the hall rooms at 8 p.m. All members are urged to be present.

In the meantime the school is in operation. Although temporarily overcrowded in more departments on account of the reduction in the staff over last term, a re-arrangement of the classes is being arranged to meet conditions.

English Farmers Coming to Alberta

A news report from Vancouver states: "A group of nine English agriculturists whose ancestors have farmed for generations in the Manchester district of England, are on their way to visit to inspect a farm in the British Columbia expecting to purchase land, but have been so delighted with the country that they intend to buy a residence in Vancouver, where members of the party will visit during the winter."

"On the advice of their bankers the visitors brought $2,000 each with them, leaving the remainder of their money on deposit in England, in the hope that the exchange situation would improve before they paid for their farms in the new west."

To Release MacSwiney If Murder Stopped

A dispatch to the London Times from Vienna, Switzerland, quotes David Lloyd George, the British premier, as saying that if guarantees are given that the murder of politicians in Ireland will cease, the premier is convinced that Mr. Lloyd George MacSwiney and the other hunger strikers will be released from prison. Other special dispatches tend to confirm the report printed in the Times.

According to the Times, the premier said that not a single one of the deluge of appeals for clemency offered the slightest assurance that such killing would be stopped. He added that the unconditional release of the imprisoned would be dangerous to the security of the Irish police, and make government in Ireland impossible.

Increase in Implements Was Unwarranted

Declaring prices of farm implements in the United States to have increased without warrant through "concoction" of manufacturers and dealers, the federal trade commission in a report made public yesterday, is repelling of anti-trust proceedings against implement manufacturers and dealers.

The commission declared that its investigation, which was ordered by the senate, disclosed that in the period between 1914 and 1918 prices paid by farmers for implements advanced 75 per cent with the greater portion of the increase coming in 1917 and 1918.

Notwithstanding the increase, farmers of the United States, according to the commission's report, "were prevented from making as much profit as before because the prices of farm products increased to an even greater extent."

Big Salt Lake is Discovered in Alberta

One hundred and eighty miles west of Calgary, just across the Alberta boundary at Smoky, Saskatchewan, is a lake lake that is believed to be the saltiest in the world. It is more than five times saltier than Salt Lake in Utah and Lake Ararat is five times saltier than the Dead Sea. This lake, which is 185 acres in area, is a commercial project owned by five men, who have no intention of selling it to others and who have refused an offer from P. Burns for the whole project.

They have already installed what is known as a solar plant for drying out the salt but this is a slow process which is delayed when the weather is bad and especially when it is rainy. They are now planning to build a dam at Winnipeg and will be ready for operation shortly. With this working the output will be ten tons a day. This will be the first unit and others will be added in due course. It is believed that a maximum of 800 tons a day can be obtained.

Britain Regaining Commercial Position

The Daily Telegraph's Sydney correspondent states that an industrial crisis in the continent in Australia by the demand for 44-hour week and no Saturday work.

The Personal Side

PROMINENT WESTERN CHARACTERS—SOME INTERESTING ANECDOTES OF PEOPLE WE ALL KNOW.

P. M. ANDERSON, K.C.

Last week we had references in our columns to two Saskatchewan lawyers. It would be impossible to mention prominent lawyers of the province without bringing to mind P. M. Anderson, K.C., of Regina. Mr. Anderson is not only an able lawyer, but a prince of good fellows. He is everybody's friend. From being a member of the junior bar a few years ago he has rapidly come to the front as one of the leading counsel of the west. He is a man of indefatigable industry and he never goes into court, but what he has his brief at his finger ends. He is tactful and possesses an excellent knowledge of human nature that stands him in good stead before a jury. He has a wonderful record of successes to his credit. He has fought a number of labor cases against corporations and as a result many a poor man who has been lamed for life as the result of an accident incurred during his occupation, has been awarded sufficient damages to be a considerable palliation of his injuries. Mr. Anderson is still a young man, in the very prime of his days. He was born in Paisley, Ontario, forty-one years ago. He attended the High School in Belleville and afterwards graduated with honors at Queen's University, taking the honors course in political science and history. He studied law with the firm of Aikins and Robson of Winnipeg, one of the best firms in all the wide west. He came to Regina about 1909 and joined the firm of Mackenzie, Brown & Company in 1912. He formed a firm of his own which almost immediately leaped into an extensive practice. Mr. Anderson has many gifts which enable him to deal with the public with great advantage. He is one of those kindly souls who like to be nice to people. He has a very wide humanity and is everyone's friend. He is at present most strenuously engaged in a most extensive law practice, but his obvious destiny is the political field. He may go very far.

OXEN AND HORSES

Many people in this country will remember the Barr Colony which consisted of a miscellaneous assortment of Englishmen, women, and children who, some fifteen years ago, arrived at Saskatchewan on their way to take up land which had been reserved for them around the present town of Lloydminster.

These people were completely without experience, and as the main line of the C.N.R. had not been built at that time, they were prepared to go out some 150 miles in advance of the railway and take their chances on the prairie. The whole affair was badly managed and the Canadian Immigration Department, eventually had to take charge of things.

The late C. W. Speers, Colonization Commissioner, went up to Saskatoon and superintended the trek of the Barr colonists to their land, and also endeavored to help them in every way possible by assistance and advice. The advice was not always taken in good part, but there is no doubt that a great deal of hardship, suffering and even death was averted by Mr. Speers' efforts.

On one occasion when Mr. Speers was sitting in the tent erected by the Government on the banks of the Saskatchewan, he was approached by a young man and his wife. The lady was very aggressive, excellently dressed, and wore plumes in her hat. She said to Mr. Speers:

"We want to buy a pair of horses with which to transport our belongings to our farm."

Mr. Speers said:

"How much money have you got?"

She replied: "About $500.00."

"Oh," he said, "it is not horses you want, but oxen. When you get away from the railway horses will eat up all your money in oats, whereas oxen will get all their sustenance from the prairie and give you a chance to put up some hay."

"I will go and consult with my husband," she said.

After an interval the couple returned.

The man said: "We have decided, Mr. Speers to take your advice; kindly purchase a yoke of oxen for us."

"Oh yes," said the woman, "I am sure it is quite a wise decision because they will also provide milk for the family which we are expecting."

Setting of Eggs

After the establishment of the colony, the determination and hard work of these inexperienced people were beyond praise. They certainly did very ridiculous things, but in the long run they won out.

A man came in from Wetaskiwin with a wagon packed full of all grades of fowls of various sizes and degrees which he proceeded to sell at exorbitant prices to the colonists. One city bred woman who was particularly anxious to go into poultry did not hear of this until most of the fowls had been disposed of. She, however, visited the vendor of the feathered goods, and climbing up the spokes of the wagon, fixed her eye upon a little bantam rooster, in a crate by himself.

"What kind of a 'en is that little un?" she queried.

Anxious to please, the owner of the fowl said:

"That's a setting hen, madam, and she is worth $5.00"

"I will take it," promptly responded the woman counting out the money.

She took her prize under her arm and going to the store of Murray Miller, bought a dozen picked eggs which she arranged in a most artistic manner on a cosy nest; but she could not induce the bantam to pay any attention to them. She came to the conclusion that she had been cheated and went back to the poultry man who was just pulling out his pockets full of money.

"She complained bitterly to him."

"Madam," he said, most politely, "you don't know how to go about it."

Questions and Answers

Question: Domestic Science Student. Why does boiling milk flow over the top of the saucepan?

Answer: When any liquid boils what happens is that parts of it are changed into a hot gas. This is much lighter than the liquid in which it is formed, and so it rises to the top as a bubble and there the bubbles burst and the gas is given off into the air. When a bubble formed at the bottom rises through the liquid unbroken until it reaches the top, and bursts there, we say that the liquid is boiling. In the case of water there is nothing to prevent the bubble from reaching the top of the boiling water and bursting there. Though the surface is raised everywhere for a moment by bubbles which have freed themselves, the water does not boil over. But milk is a mixture of a great many different things, some of which cannot, and some cannot. What really boils in milk is the water which, at the end of the line, is part of it. At least one of the things in the milk turns solid and forms a skin on the top of the milk when it is heated. This is one of the valuable parts of the milk and it is great waste not to eat it. Now, when the bubbles of water gas rise to the surface, they find themselves imprisoned by this solid skin that has formed on the surface, and as the hot air may lift a toy balloon so that, as we say, the milk after all, makes up the greater part of the milk. If it is carefully stirred, this may be prevented.

"Will you instruct me?" she asked.

"I will," he replied.

The two of them accordingly hied back to Murray Miller's store and purchased a biscuit box. This box was nailed to the side of the lady's shack, the nest arranged in it, and two sugar bowls made just before her arrival. The eggs were placed in the nest, and the rooster to his great indignation forced down upon them, his legs drawn through the holes in the bottom of the box, they were hobbled together with some tape, and the woman sat down confidently expecting chickens. The poor rooster suffered this indignity for about two weeks until some more enlightened neighbor informed the lady of the futility of the whole proceeding. By this time, however, the poultry seller was far away.

Despite these difficulties and tribulations, however, the members of the Barr Colony turned out to be as good settlers as any who ever came to Canada. They learned lessons in a hard school and now many of them are thriving and prosperous.

THE GILBERT CASE

Some reference was made in this column last week to a famous murder trial which took place in Regina some twelve or thirteen years ago and which was known as the Gilbert case. Josiah Gilbert, a well-known and prosperous farmer of the Regina district, was accused of conspiring with the death of a young lad who he had bought his farm. There was no doubt whatsoever that the dead man had come to his death through the explosion of a gun in the hands of Gilbert. The prosecution maintained that Gilbert had shot him with malice aforethought, the defence was that the shooting was accidental. There was an array of witnesses on both sides, but the jury was a hard one to get. He was a very thrifty, close, hard-working farmer, and had amassed considerable property. He was a man of violent temper and sinister stories were current about him. One of these tales, which was given a good deal of currency at that time, was to the effect that he had caused the death of a young lad who was working for him when he had thrown down a wall. A good deal of credence was placed on this story and although it was not brought out at the trial it apparently had a considerable effect in influencing public opinion against him. How wrong public opinion may be in these cases was very forcibly brought to the attention of the writer some years ago.

I was pulling out from Chicago a few days before Christmas, 1917, my way to the coast. There were not very many people travelling at that time, the weather was stern and inclement and it was the season of the year when most people were home. I sat, however, in the smoking car with a shrewd-looking country lawyer from North Dakota. We got into conversation and when I knew Regina he informed me that he had once been there and expressed boundless admiration for the N.W. M.P. His visit to Western Canada had occurred many years previously and he related the incident. He said that a lad from the town in which he practiced his profession in North Dakota, had come up to the Saskatchewan country to work with a farmer named Gilbert. The lad had subsequently met with a violent death and as some rumors had penetrated down to his home town of foul play, the gentleman in question had been retained by some of the friends of the family to go up to Regina and investigate the circumstances of his death. He accordingly went to the northwest and related the services of the N.W.M.P. The body of the boy who had lost his life on the Gilbert farm was exhumed, an autopsy was performed and it was proven beyond peradventure that he had died from asphyxiation, probably arising from the gases in the well.

Gilbert was convicted of murder and sentenced to death, but after a careful perusal of the evidence by the then Minister of Justice, his sentence was commuted to penal servitude in the Edmonton penitentiary, where he died within a year. During the course of the trial Gilbert's wife, who had been an invalid for years, died.

Treaty Payments

"Now Peter," said the Colonel, "tell all the Indians to gather in close to the building. I want to say to them something that will be of interest to every man, woman and child on these four reserves."

The Colonel referred to was none other than Allan McDonough, who had been the whole of treaty number four.

The party addressed was Peter, a young Indian, known among the Indians as "Cheewah Ahbees" or "The Little Dragon Fly."

Date October 28, 1885. The occasion was the payment of their annuity monies to the File Hill Indians.

Standing in the door of the ration house and addressed them through his interpreter.

"My friends, I am here this morning to begin payment of your treaty money. I have arranged with your friend, Totose Apwe, to assist me."

Looking Backward

"Under ordinary circumstances you would have had this money four or five months ago, but your misconduct during the last twelve months has had not a little to do with the delay."

"In all the reserves under my jurisdiction from Moose Mountain to Touchwood and from Pelly to Piapot, the File Hills group is the only place where I have had serious trouble. The only place where wrong doing has been rampant."

"You should thank the Great Spirit that through it all you have been so far from the File Hills. It has been lost on the side of your misdeeds and that no white man's blood is on your hands."

"In July of last year, (1884) two men, Chiefs Star Blanket and Little Black Bear went from these reserves to the South Saskatchewan to listen to Riel's message."

One Loyal Chief

"The Bear has since passed away, but from the day of his return until the day of his death, he never ceased to tell you right way, and to exhort you to be peaceable and law abiding." (Star Blanket's approval "How?")

"I see Star Blanket sitting yonder. Can he say that he has done likewise? I wait for his answer?"

A profound silence followed. No reply was made.

Cattle Killing

"Early last winter," continued the Colonel, "you men, though well supplied with food and ammunition by the Queen's generous hand, began killing off your cattle for your feasting and dancing. It is significant that the first killing occurred on Star Blanket's reserve."

"In December last I drove through the cold all the way from Indian Head to talk with you about this, but you closed your lips and would tell me nothing about the guilty ones."

Information Suppressed

"Headman, Chee-poo-Stoin, was about to give me some information when he was stopped by two of your young men. Star Blanket admitted that Riel told the Indians cattle must be killed in case of hunger. All last winter you held your revenge and hid your eyes. You have had your silence, now you must pay the fiddler."

Paying the Fiddler

"The cattle you killed must be replaced at your expense. The Government cannot condone your wrongdoing by paying for them out of the public funds."

"Later in the day after I have had a talk with your young men, I will pay you each five dollars in accordance with the terms of your treaty with the Queen."

"Out of every five dollars you must give me two dollars to be placed in my feet, and that is all the purchase of heifers to be sent to you next spring."

Easy Method of Accountability

"In order to prevent delay and loss of time I will simply hand each of you three dollars keeping your two dollar contribution in my money bag."

"If this is not clear to you I am here to answer questions."

Silence Gives Consent

Needless to say no questions were asked. The Indians realized that, in taking long chances on official immunity, they had gambled and lost, and that if they shared Colonel, holding the trump card, had won out.

A Second Indictment

Now Peter, resumed the Agent, "ask all the young men to come near. I have to speak to them about a matter much more serious than killing a few head of cattle. Some of you have killed a horse, was given three months in jail, the others receiving thirty days each."

The Colonel's Diplomacy

"Young braves, it is no pleasure to me to speak the words to which you must now listen. I must first, however, commend your action in putting in a good crop last spring. But in May you allowed a scold of an old man to come over you."

Exodus By Night

"One night you gathered all your people together, your cattle and your horses, and with the exception of four or five families you left your reserves. You stole your lastest cow, a few horses, and your buckboard and saddle, leaving you are a three horses, and their without any means of travel."

Depredations

"In crossing the country you stole horses from the white settlers and when these had served your purposes for transport you turned them loose to go where they might. Fortunately they returned to their owners or were recovered."

"In one case a white man's horse was grossly abused all the while being out from his tail, leaving only the stump. For this damage the Government, whose word is law, is obliged to make settlement."

"During your three weeks stay at your campsite above the mission you were a menace to the white people and an annoyance to the military authorities."

Drastring Measures

"You were supplied with rations on understanding that you would promptly go back to your reserves. When the food ran out you did not leave you, then you killed more cattle. From day to day you pay off returning until at last a soldiers firing party levelled their guns at the tops of your tepee poles. Then you moved."

Placing The Responsibility

"I hold you young men responsible as the ringleaders in this uprising. You cannot expect to escape your share of blame. I tell you to you thus sternly my heart goes out to you in pity and I wish to be as lenient—with you as possible."

Casting The Net

"Now I ask each of you, guilty of any of these depredations, to stand. Your names will be written down and two policemen will be sent to Regina for trial. If you go quietly you will not be handcuffed. At your trial you will be prepared to bear such punishment as the judge may impose."

Silence reigned for some time. Then a strange thing happened. It is not often that an Indian voice is heard in the councils of her people, but at this point "Aqua Moos," widow of Chief Black Bear, and mother of Peukitch, stepped forward.

A Widow Speaks

"Shunish Okemow," (Money Chief) she began "Hear me a little. I am only a Chief's poor widow, but I will bear such punishment as the judge may impose to the voice that is still. My son, my son, my son, I would say to him and to his young friends what his father would say were he here."

Hereditry

Then turning to the group of young braves, "My children, our people may do wrong, but they should not fear what follows. You cannot be the sons of your fathers if you fear danger or pain. You must not hide the truth from your Agent in order that you may escape the White Mother's law."

"Your fathers faced the enemy's gun, his tomahawk, and scolding knife, ignoring death. You are the sons of your fathers, though your deeds send you through the prison door. Let your hearts be strong. I have spoken."

Confessions

No sooner had she concluded than Peukitch rose and said, saying frankly "Neyah payuk, (I am one)."

SOME CHRONICLES OF THE DAYS OF THE WAR PARTY AND THE BUFFALO—STORIES TOLD AROUND THE FIRES OF THE HUNTING CAMPS OF BYGONE DAYS

The R.N.W.M.P. in The Far North

The Journey to the Yukon. Two Expeditions of N.W.M.P. to Establish Overland Route from Edmonton. Police Inspectors Routledge and Moody. An Impossible Trail. The Haultains and Stricklands.

Strange Expeditions

The gold rush to the Yukon resulted in the formation of many strange and weird expeditions to that country where the treasure was protected by natural barriers of mountain and glacier, river and forest. Seattle which was the headquarters for the Yukon traders was rapidly forging ahead; business was congested; that city and every available ship was secured to carry passengers to the north. It became at one time almost impossible to obtain passage from the coast cities and some of the Argonauts turned their attention to an overland route. Strange-looking vehicles started out from Edmonton, and many of them were equipped with everything money could purchase to go into the wilderness in the face of difficulties which had to be overcome.

Many Lives Lost

For a long time, from 1897 to 1900, stragglers were coming back from the wilds to Edmonton, never having obtained their objective, some of them passed months even years in the wilderness, before rugged, worn and weary, they managed to totter back to Edmonton. There were many lives lost, but there is no doubt that the mortality would have been very much greater had it not been for the assistance rendered to these impractical dreamers by the N.W.M.P. One or two small parties eventually got through to the Yukon, but they were the hardest and disaster fell upon all the others.

N.W.M.P. Expedition

About 1897 it was decided to send the N.W.M.P. expedition through from Edmonton to the Yukon to find out if that road were feasible. There was no doubt that the police would accomplish the trip; they had never failed in any arduous undertaking, and were not likely to begin at that time.

Inspector Moody

In 1897 two parties of police were sent out to follow this route, one under the command of Inspector J. D. Moody, one of the most efficient officers who ever belonged to the famous corps and another under Inspector Routledge.

Inspector Routledge's Task

Inspector Routledge had a trip before him that might well daunt the bravest. His objective was Fort Simpson, about 200 miles beyond the Great Slave Lake at the junction of the Liard and MacKenzie river. It was his duty to prospect for a good trail and to give what relief he could to parties bound for the Yukon that he might encounter en route. He carried mail with him as well. The journey was made successfully and much valuable information obtained. The distance travelled was 1086 miles each way.

A More Difficult Task

Inspector Moody's task was much more difficult one. His destination was Fort Selkirk at the junction of the Pelly and Yukon rivers; this was a distance of over 1600 miles and no one who has not traversed that country can imagine the dangers which beset his road. Forests which had grown up over fallen timber of titanic size had to be penetrated, and in many cases, progress could only be made when the debris of the growth of forgotten generations had been chopped away with axes. Again the path lay through trembling muskeg and black bog; great lakes often barred the way; rivers of great volume had to be forded; and barren mountain chains had to be crossed.

Add to these difficulties the asperities of the climate which, in winter time, dropped on occasion to sixty degrees below zero and in summer tortured voyageurs with the fierce sun and millions of poisonous mosquitoes and flies which attacked men and beasts alike, one would have some faint conception of the difficulties of the trip. After leaving Edmonton, Mr. Moody and his men crossed the mountain by the pass near the headwater of the half way river. He had horses and dogs with him, but so barren was the country of natural game that he had to kill his horses in the winter to provide food for his men. He had to make a trip to the Hudson Bay store in B.C. to obtain much needed supplies which took him nearly 1,000 miles out of his way. Nevertheless after hardships almost incredible he succeeded in reaching his objective in the Yukon territory, and afterwards went on to Dawson City, from which point he returned home by way of Vancouver.

Lost In The Wilderness

At one time he was given up for lost, the wilderness had swallowed him and his party completely and utterly, and it was a matter of the greatest relief when at length a telegram was received, over the Government lines at the M.P.H.C. in Regina that he had succeeded in his task.

An Impossible Trail

However, the result of the expedition was to prove beyond the question of a doubt that the Edmonton trail to the Yukon was an impossible one. It is doubtful if any more arduous task has ever been carried to a successful conclusion by any members of the N.W.M.P., than Inspector Moody's trip in 1897/1898 from Edmonton to Fort Selkirk. Inspector Moody has done a tremendous amount of geographical work for the police. He was, if I am not mistaken, for some years, in command of a small steamboat on the shores of the Hudson Bay where he compiled valuable data for the Government.

The N.W.M.P. have had, in the past, various duties, but we have not been in the habit of regarding them as sailors. Nevertheless, Inspector Moody and his men most successfully braved the storms and dangers of the waters of the northern sea. He held the rank of superintendent in the police until a few years ago. He is now ranching in the vicinity of Maple Creek.

Moody's Origin

He belonged to one of the British families, like the Haultains and Stricklands, who settled at Lakeside, near Peterboro, fifty or sixty years ago. He comes by his seafaring legitimately as his forebears were Orkney men. He was closely connected with the Strickland family of which Agnes Strickland and her sister, have been, perhaps, the most distinguished members. One of the Peterboro Stricklands, D'Arcy Strickland, held a position in the mounted police for a number of years and was identified with the work of the Force in the Yukon.

PURITY - QUALITY - ECONOMY

With the increased cost of labor and materials due to war conditions, it is not reasonable to suppose that a really first class baking powder can be made and sold at the old prices. Rather than sacrifice the quality of we found it necessary to make slight increases in price during the war period. Even though Magic Baking Powder may cost a few cents more than the ordinary kinds it is still by far the most economical baking powder on the market to-day when purity, strength and leavening qualities are taken into consideration.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

I have already received some very interesting letters, and this week am printing one of them, and next week, I shall print another, and as I promised you, the best letter received before the 1st of October shall receive a prize. I have, indeed, been very interested in hearing exactly how the boys and girls live on the prairie farms and think it is very jolly for them to have such big open spaces in which to play, rather than to be crowded in narrow streets and yards, or cooped up in apartments in some large city. It is wonderful to think that all the boys and girls who are going to school now will be the men and women of tomorrow and some of them will, perhaps like the famous men and women of the future, whose names will shine on history's pages as the wonderful men and women of the past have done. But although only a few can be famous for learning, or some special talent, yet all can grow up to be sterling men and women of worth, and it is such men and women after all that compose the best part of the world.

It should be glad if you write to me sometime, when you would tell me which famous man or woman you most admire in history, and why, as we would all be interested.

Now as it is a very hot day, and this letter is quite long enough for warm, summer weather, I will close, but remain as

Affectionately as ever,

AUNT BETTY.

Box 46, Duff, Sask., Aug. 21,
Dear Aunt Betty.

This week I saw your letter to the boys and girls in the Melville Progress. We live on the prairie, three and a half miles from Duff, I have two brothers and one sister. I am the oldest and am 12 years old.

We are cutting our grain; it is all ready; and we must cut it as soon as we can. We started school on the 16th of the month. I love school, I passed into grade five at school in June. I would like to be a school teacher. We have a new school teacher, his name is Mr. Charlie Dunn.

We organized a club on Monday and named it Duff Progress club. I am vice-president. I am collecting money to buy new games for the school. I have all ready got $2.10.

Well, I guess I must close as it is time to take the men their lunch. With best love to you and all members, I remain,

Your niece,

ALICIA NICHOLS.

ROBINSON CRUSOE MAKES A CANOE

After Robinson Crusoe had been on the island for six years he made a canoe, in which he tried to sail around the island, and was all but drowned. He made himself clothes out of the skins he saved and also became clever in making baskets. He describes himself in the new clothes which he made and says: "I had a great, high, shapely cap made of goat's skin, a rough jacket also of goat's skin, a pair of open knee breeches, made of the skin of an old he-goat and a pair of buskins. I had on a broad belt of dried goat's skin; and in a frog on either side of this I hung a little saw and my hatchet. At the end of another belt which hung over my shoulder hung two pouches made of goat's skin too. In one, hung my powder and in another my shot. At my back I carried my basket, on my shoulder my gun, and over my head a clumsy, ugly, goat skin umbrella. My beard was pretty short, but on my upper lip I wore a large pair of Mahometan moustachios.

You will see, if you can call up a picture of Robinson as he must have looked in these clothes that he was dressed very suitably for the life which he was leading, but I am sure we would all stare at him if he should walk across the prairie dressed like that.

When not tending his plantations or his animals, Crusoe went out on short trips in his canoe, or took walks about the island. Altogether he found his time well occupied.

After one man had been wounded, their car had been piloted by nine or ten, a bullet in an 11-mile chase by Custom Officer H. A. Roberts, a Constable, N. D., L. G. Mills and J. Jones, of Justice, N. D., surrounded to Roberts, 12 miles south of the international boundary.

The men were spotted by the customs officials and suspected of smuggling liquor across the line. When they refused to stop, the officers acted by revolver bullets. During the fusillade one of the prisoners was wounded in the hand. They were caught in a dump of bushes after abandoning their automobile.

Increase for C. P. R. Employees

Negotiations have been concluded between the committee representing the Canadian Pacific and committee representing the different classes of its employees.

The general conclusion arrived at is for an increase averaging a dollar a day for each employee in the eastern division to be retroactive from May 1st. This means many millions of dollars expenditure. George Hodge states that this includes every branch of the road, including 8,000 men and telegraphers. The company has also concluded arrangements with conductors and trainmen on the eastern line for an increase in pay practically in accord with the recent award of the United States Railway Labor Board.

SAYS CANADA NOT HOSTILE TO RUSSIA.

There is no need for restrictions or discussion of hostile action being by Canada against Russia, according to the prime minister, Mr. Arthur Meighen.

Speaking on the subject of resolutions of protest against such hostile action which have been passed at various meetings, Mr. Meighen stated to the Canadian Press that there was no intention of the government of such action. The subject had not been much as mentioned and manifestly no such action could be in contemplation.

According to Mr. Muckelton, chief engineer of the Lethbridge Northern Irrigation project, who has just returned to the city from meeting the boards of the government in Edmonton, financial arrangements have been made to enable the district to carry out. No particulars were announced, but it is understood that the district has been put in a position financially to go on with its work. The election will be held about the end of the month. The only 4 day at present is the sending back of the bylaw to Toronto to be approved.

Although Ontario has a banner apple crop, the price will be high, in part because of increased cost in the crooked an dip part because of the strong demand for British quality of Canadian apples from Britain's owing to the crop failure there.

"May we play this one, Mother?"

FORTUNATE are the children in homes made musical by the Columbia Grafonola.

An honest liking for good music comes to them naturally. You need not worry over the children spoiling your valuable records. The Non Set Automatic Stop, an exclusive Columbia feature, is a big advantage in this respect. Just start the Grafonola and it plays and stops itself.
